BUSH ET RICE POUR LE OUI (thanks to Jean Bricmont)<o:p></o:p>

L'analyse de John Vinocur<o:p></o:p>

« If EU constitution fails, U.S. won't be gloating » International Herald Tribune, 24 May 2005<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

« For one thing, a negative outcome requiring Europe to rethink its future path very likely means slowing down the entry process of Turkey and Ukraine into the EU - both projects for Europe's future that the Americans stand behind. The more advanced candidacies of Romania and Bulgaria, both Bush administration buddies, could falter too. All this does not go in the direction of the administrationn's notion that an enlarged, coherent EU partner is actually its best possible European play. »<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

D'une part, un résultat négatif qui force l'Europe à repenser son futur risque très probablement de ralentir l'entrée de la Turquie et de l'Ukraine dans l'Union - deux projets pour l'avenir de l'Europe que les Américains soutiennent. Les candidatures plus avancées de la Roumanie et de la Bulgarie, toutes deux alliées de l'administration Bush, pourraient échouer aussi. Tout cela ne va pas dans la direction de l'idée de l'administration (Bush) selon laquelle un partenaire européen élargi et cohérent est en fait sa meilleure carte.<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

et surtout :<o:p></o:p>

« An official, sitting in his office here, couldn't have been clearer on the European constitution : 'If they think it would get them a few yes points, we've told the French we're ready to condemn the thing in minutes.' »<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

« nous avons dit à nos amis français, dit un officiel américain (à Washington), que, si cela peut favoriser le oui, nous sommes prêts à condamner le traité »

Condoleeza Rice pour le oui<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

QUESTION : Dr. Rice, you may know that in the big debate there is in Europe about the EU constitution, and especially in France, there are some in the "yes" camp who argue that a "no" vote would be a vote for Bush. How do you respond to that and how would you vote if you had a chance ?<o:p></o:p>

(Laughter.)<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

SECRETARY RICE : Yes, for — yes. I don't have a vote so it doesn't matter. But let me just say that the United States has been, from the very beginning, supportive of European integration, going all the way back to the coal and steel community. And the United States remains supportive of the European project. I think, in Brussels, the President made very clear that we believe that a united Europe, a Europe that is strong and capable, a Europe that is clearly at its core democratic and that has a long tradition and heritage with the United States, can only be good for the march - the forward march of progress and democracy in the world.<o:p></o:p>

<![if !supportEmptyParas]> <![endif]><o:p></o:p>

And so we want to see the European project succeed because a strong Europe will be good for the forces of democracy. We would hope that a strong Europe would be outward looking, that it would continue to bring, as it has new, more members. It is been an important magnet for the East Europeans. I think it continues to be an important set of incentives for countries that are still in the transition to democracy. And with NATO, the European Union forms the two pillars of a Europe whole, free and at peace. <o:p></o:p>
